

THIS WEEK'S TOPIC IS

TALKING ABOUT ARGUMENTS

Why is this important?

This week, your child has been discussing what to do if they are angry or annoyed about something and may have an argument. Arguments are unavoidable and can be a major source of a young person's life stressors, therefore helping them navigate this with as little anxiety as possible is key.

What has your child been taught this week?

- EYFS – Young children struggle to see other people's points of view and so they have discussed who can help them to solve any problems they have. How you speak to young children about others who have upset them will set the tone for how they will react to arguments as they grow up so don't get annoyed yourself or say mean things.
- KS1 – Children often get into arguments which can lead to fights with peers. This is because they are angry at the time which means they won't find a solution. KS1 children have discussed how to be calm before you try to solve a problem instead of shouting and arguing.

Key Stage 2

- LKS2 – Children in these year groups have discussed the importance of speaking up for themselves in conflicts and ensuring their point of view is explained – this is to stop them bottling up anger.
- UKS2 – These children have discussed compromise and how that can help us solve arguments without shouting and screaming.

Supporting your children with these processes will help them succeed.
